FAMILY CIRCLE.

The Infidel and His Daughter.

[Suggested by reading a newspaper paragraph describing the scene between Ethan Allen and his daughter on the eve of her death, she asked the stern infidel in whose faith he should have her die, his or her mother's.]

"The damps of death are coming fast,

My father o'er my brow;

The past, with all its scenes, has fled,

And I must turn me now

To that dim future which in vain

My feeble eyes descry;

Tell me, my father, in this hour,

In whose stern faith to die?

"In thine! I watched the scornful smile

And heard the withering tone,

When'er the Christian's humble hope

Was placed above thine own;

I've heard thee speak of coming death

Without a shade of gloom,

And laugh at all the childish fears

That cluster round the tomb.

"Or is it in my mother's faith?

How fondly do I trace,

Through many a weary year long past,

That calm and saintly face!

How often do I call to mind,

Now she is 'neath the sod,

The place, the hour in which she drew

My early thoughts to God.

"'Twas then she took this sacred book,

And from its burning page

Read how its truths support the soul

In youth and failing age!

And bade me in its precepts live,

And by its precepts die.

That I might share a home of love

In worlds beyond the sky.

"My father, shall I look above,

Amid this gathering gloom,

To Him whose promises of love

Extend beyond the tomb;

Or curse the being who has blest

This checkered path of mine,

And promises eternal rest,

Or die, my sire, in thine?"

The frown upon that warrior brow,

Passed like a cloud away,

And tears coursed down the rugged cheek

That flowed not till that day.

"Not—not in mine," with choking voice,

The skeptic made reply—

"But in thy mother's holy faith,

My daughter, may'st thou die!"

A Remarkable Fight.

A South Missouri man recently was tried on a charge of assault. The State brought into court as the weapons a rail, an ax, a pair of tongs, a saw and a rifle. The defendant's counsel exhibited as the other man's weapons a scythe blade, a pitchfork, a pistol and a hoe. The jury's verdict is said to have been:

"Resolved, That we, the jury, would have given $1 to have seen the fight."

MAY SHIP LIQUOR

Into Local Option Towns, Supreme Court Says.

Kentucky Law Conflicts With Federal Constitution.

The United States Supreme Court on May 24 reversed the judgment of the Circuit Court of Hart county, Ky., in the case of the Adams Express Company vs. the Commonwealth of Kentucky, Justice Harlan dissenting.

It was contended that the Kentucky statute, as applied to the transportation of liquor from State to State, was in conflict with the section of the Federal Constitution giving Congress control over interstate commerce. This contention was denied by the State court, and thus a question arose under the Federal Constitution decided adversely to the plaintiff in error.

Justice Brewer said: "Liquor, however obnoxious and hurtful it may be in the judgment of many, is a recognized article of commerce."

The court then quotes from the decision of Justice White in the Vance & Vandercrook Company case, which says: "The proposition is well established that the right to send liquors from one State into another, and the act of sending the same, is interstate commerce, the regulation whereof has been committed by the Constitution to Congress, and, hence, that a State law which denies such a right or substantially interferes with or hampers the same is in conflict with the Constitution." "Clearly in the cases cited," said the court, "the State statute cannot be sustained. The judgment of the Circuit Court of Hart county is reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with the views expressed."

Colored Song Writer Dead.

Reuben Crowders, the colored song writer, died in New York City. He was a native of Bowling Green, Ky. He was a composer and a singer of note, and sang throughout this country and in Europe. He made famous "All Coons Look Alike to Me." He is said to have cleared $40,000 on the sale of one of his songs.

UNUSUAL SCENE

Witnessed at Auditorium When Saloon Question Comes Up.

In Lexington on Tuesday night, May 25, Evangelist W. T. Brooks made public answer to Mayor Skain's interview published in Monday's Leader. This question was handed the evangelist by some one:

"Mr. Brooks: I note in the Leader that the Mayor says that the police are doing all in their power to enforce the laws against Sunday violation by the saloons and that he expresses surprise that any of the saloons are open. How many people in Lexington do you suppose will believe what the Mayor says?"

Mr. Brooks, in answering, said that he would not assume to know more about the city than its own citizens, and asked: "If there are those who think he is correct, please indicate the same by rising to your feet." Not a soul stood. Finally one man arose.

"Now, how many people believe the Mayor has misrepresented the facts?"

Practically the whole audience of about one thousand people rose to their feet.

"Now the Mayor of Lexington has his answer. If I were Mayor of Lexington and one thousand of its best citizens publicly declared that I had misrepresented the facts in a matter like this, I would resign my office and apologize for my poor benighted condition. You people have passed sentence upon your own official."

"Now, I want to ask how many people in the audience have seen people passing in and out of Lexington saloons on Sunday and could testify of your own knowledge that the saloons are open on the Lord's Day."

About three hundred people stood up.

"There is evidence for the Mayor, cried the evangelist. 'Now he wants me to swear out warrants against the five men who sold liquor to two men last Sunday, which I do not intend to do. I am not prosecuting a few men of Lexington. I am after the good people of Lexington to make your officials enforce the law against all these saloons, and from the message I have received today, I am persuaded that the people are aroused.'"

Stuart Wins—Harmon Owes Him Nearly $24,000.

The Court of Appeals affirmed the case of Archer Harmon against T. G. Stuart from Clark county and directed that judgment be entered in favor of Stuart for nearly $24,000. The suit grew out of a deal in mountain land made over twenty years ago, and the case has been to the Court of Appeals three times.

Did Not Quite Understand.

"You know, Elsie, 'ferment' means to grow," said the teacher. "Now you write a sentence on the blackboard containing the word 'ferment.'"

After a moment's thought, Elsie wrote as follows: "In summer I love to ferment among the flowers in our garden."

SALOONIST

Whose License is Revoked Cannot Recover Fees.

By a decision of the Court of Appeals at Frankfort, May 26, a saloonkeeper whose license has been revoked by the proper authorities cannot recover from the city the unearned portion of the yearly license fee which he has paid for the privilege of opening the saloon. The case was that of the city of Louisville against Mary Cain. The License Board revoked Mary Cain's license because of alleged selling of liquor in violation of the Sunday laws. The woman tendered her license and demanded a return of the unearned portion of the license. She sued and recovered judgment for $137. The full court was sitting in consideration of the case and reversed the judgment of the lower court. The higher court says that the woman had nothing to surrender, her license having been revoked, and that therefore she was not entitled to recover. The court decided, in addition, that as no definite sum was named in Mary Cain's bond for her fulfillment of the requirements of the law, the city cannot recover on her bond.

Seek Cobless Corn.

E. P. House, the dry farm plant experimenter, has received from H. J. Sconce, of Sidell, Ill., one seed of cobless corn grown by the Illinois man. House asked for three seeds to plant in a hill, but only one could be spared and it will be carefully tended. The cobless corn grown by the Illinois man resembles very closely the "primitive husk" corn. Each kernel grows on a parent stem and each kernel is inclosed in its own husk, all being enveloped in one large husk. The Illinois man has succeeded in eliminating the stem and by taking the very tip-top kernel of the present variety expects ultimately to evolve a perfect cobless corn.

HAZELRIGG & SON

DANGER OF THE HOUSE-FLY.

BY DR. L. O. HOWARD.

To make people realize the danger that lurks in the sticky footsteps of the house fly or typhoid fly, Dr. L. O. Howard, one of the foremost entomologists in this country, has written the following article on the danger of the fly:

"Get your screens up. Do it now. The typhoid flies are just beginning to make their appearance. Don't let them get established."

"It is demonstrated beyond question that the fly—what people used to call the house fly—is the principal cause of typhoid fever. It is also a big causative factor in tuberculosis and intestinal diseases."

"Take the Spanish-American war for example. It furnishes the most striking instance of the danger of the typhoid fly, previously considered harmless."

"One man in every five who went to the front got typhoid fever during the campaign, the disease manifesting itself within the first two months of encampment. Typhoid fever caused 80 per cent. of all the deaths in that war. Typhoid was four times as fatal as the Spaniards' bullets."

"A United States army medical commission was appointed to find out the cause of this remarkable epidemic."

"Most people thought that bad water was the cause of typhoid. It was not. Bad water brought on only a small percentage of the deaths."

"The real cause, as the medical commission learned after a thorough investigation, was the typhoid fly."

"The fly thrives in the country, where it breeds in stables and carries disease to the farmers' homes. It thrives in the city, where it can spread the thousands of germs it carries among thousands of people."

"It is highly important for people to be on their guard. City ordinances governing stables and the disposition of refuse, and the placing of screens in windows and doors of houses by individuals will help much in the meantime."

Clean Primaries Planned.

The Democrats and Republicans of Owensboro have united in a movement for clean primaries, and have about reached the decision that a joint primary is the best solution of the corruption problem. If the plan goes through the expense will be divided, and there will be two sets of officers and two ballot boxes at every poll. By this means floaters cannot vote in both primaries and dealing in registration certificates will be stopped.

Name of Jefferson Davis Reappears on Old Bridge.

The name of Jefferson Davis has again been chiseled again into the stone in famous Cabin John's Bridge, six miles west of Washington, D. C., President Roosevelt having given instruction to this effect previous to his retirement.

As the bridge was built when Mr. Davis was Secretary of War, his name was contained in the stone tablet in the structure, which is the aqueduct over which the district's water supply passes. During President Lincoln's administration, and after Mr. Davis had become President of the Confederacy, the latter's name was chiseled out by some staunch adherent of the Union.
